

Collectible

I save my pennies,
Though they've become worthless.

I save my notes,
Though they've ruined so much precious wood.

I save my books,
Though they burn so beautifully.

I save my energy,
Though the contract says I only rent.

I save my trash,
Though it's not made in limited batch.

I save my breath,
Though they know I'll simply ruin it.

I save my soul,
Though they say it has no market.

I save my neighbors,
Though they beg me not to.
